

LINES.

FOR THE COMMONER, BY K. G.

Hast never heard on summer eves
The wind with its whispers low;
Sighing through the poplar trees,
Recalling the long ago?

The long ago, when the days were bright,
And life but a joyful dream;
When the hopes and fears of earlier years
Were not what now they seem.

Long ere the heart had learned to doubt
When the smiles we gave were true;
When the cares and griefs were forgotten soon
Which fate o'er our childhood threw.

When merry peals of laughter rang
From the guileless lips of youth,
When ev'ry thought was innocence,
And every word was truth.

When eyes were all undimmed by care,
And the brow was free from pain;
Ere the soul had found its bitterness,
Or the lips had learned to drink

The bitter draught of a blighted hope,
Or the trust of a heart berey'd,
Or the severed tie of early love,
Or the fondest heart-sorrows strayed?

Such are the memories recalled
By the voices of the breeze,
As it walls and sighs in plying tone
Through the beautiful poplar trees

Then, hast thou ne'er bared on summer eves
The wind with its whisper low,
Sighing through the poplar trees,
Recalling the long ago?

2 CTS. Worth.

In Virginia, where the law fixes the marriage fee at one dollar, there is a reminiscence of a couple who many years ago called in a person and requested him to marry them.

"Where is my fee?" said the functionary.
The parties who were to make their frames did so at once and found the joint amount to be 27 cents.

"I can't marry you for that sum," said the grave old gentleman.

"A little bit of service will go a long way," suggested the male applicant.

"No, you don't pay for the size of the bill, but for the good you hope it will do you," said the person.

The last intent on marriage, began to weep, but the person was inexorable, and the couple turned sadly to depart.

Just then a happy thought seemed to strike the forlorn maiden, and she turned and cried through her tears: "Please sir, if you can't marry us, all up, won't you marry us twenty-seven cents worth; we can come for the rest some other time?"

This was too much for the person. He married them "full up" and they went on their way rejoicing.

The following beautiful passage is from Henry's commentary on the bible:

Adam was first formed, then Eve, and she was made from man, and for man, all of which are given as reasons for humility, modesty, silence and submissiveness of that sex in general, and particularly the subjection and reverence which wives owe to their husbands. Yet man being made the last of creation, as the best and most excellent of all, Eve's being made after adam, out of him, puts an honor upon that sex, as the glory of man. If man is the head she is the crown: a crown to her husband, the crown of visible creation. The man was dust refined, but the woman was doubly refined; one remove from earth.

Woman was made of a rib out of the side of Adam; not made out of his head, to top him; nor of his feet to be trampled upon by him; but out of his side, to be equal with him; under his arm, to be protected; and near his heart to be loved.

Says the Miner: "A man who arrived here a few days ago, from White Pine, Nevada, says that the lifeless bodies of four men, supposed to have perished from thirst—were found on the desert near Las Vegas Ranch, a few days before his arrival there. When found, three of the bodies were naked. Letters were found which proved that one of the party was named Clingersmith, and he had formerly resided in San Francisco, and that he has friends living there. All four of the bodies were decently buried."
